Activities & Engagement:

Children engaged in a wide range of creative, physical, and imaginative activities throughout the summer. Popular activities included arts and crafts, painting wooden spoons, bracelet making, colouring, drawing, postcard activities, den building, Dobble, imaginative role play, football, swings, zip wire activities, skate park use, and games such as Beans, Red Light Green Light, and other child-led activities.

Outdoor play equipment was heavily utilised throughout the programme, with children particularly enjoying the swings, helicopter equipment, climbing activities, and other park features. The hammock proved especially popular and was used regularly alongside den-building activities which encouraged creativity and collaborative play.

Many children demonstrated strong imaginative play skills, creating shops, games, rules, competitions, and role-play scenarios using available resources. Arts and crafts were particularly well received, allowing children to be creative while providing opportunities for quieter engagement during periods of hot weather.

Children frequently directed their own play, developed games with peers, and used resources creatively, demonstrating independence, confidence, and decision-making skills.

Welsh language was incorporated throughout the programme through greetings, colours, manners, everyday phrases, and discussions about Welsh language learning in school. Children were encouraged to use and hear Welsh naturally within activities and conversations.

Well-being & Social Development:

The playscheme provided a safe, supportive, and inclusive environment where children were able to build confidence, develop friendships, and strengthen their social skills. Children regularly interacted positively with peers and staff, demonstrating cooperation, communication, and teamwork during both structured and free-play activities.

Many activities encouraged collaborative working, including den building, imaginative play, creative projects, and group games. Children showed increasing confidence in creating their own activities, negotiating rules, and resolving minor disagreements with support when necessary.

The programme provided opportunities for children from different backgrounds to share experiences and learn from one another. Positive social interactions helped promote inclusion, understanding, and respect for others.
